

Lowland Gardens: 'It's all homegrown'

At Lowland Gardens in Great Village, Tony and Gerrie van den Hoek know the history of all their plants.

"It's all homegrown," says Tony.

With more than 25 years' experience, the couple and their staff provide plant advice with practical confidence.

"We know our product and do what we do best," says Gerrie. That means offering a distinctive selection of annuals, perennials, herbs, baskets and containers.

New varieties are tested so staff can give customers a realistic assessment of plant growth and performance.

The superior quality of the product, helpful staff and a relaxed atmosphere combine to draw customers from Halifax, Moncton and other parts of the Maritimes.

"It's so attractive and inviting," says Yvonne Thyssen-Post, a long-time customer from Truro. "And they're always doing something new."
