

Woodlands and Meadows: Perennials for Every Garden

Woodland shade and meadow sun abound at Woodlands and Meadows in Clifton, near Truro.

People can see perennials in both light conditions in a garden setting to help them better picture how their own gardens might look when mature, says owner Jane Blackburn, who has a degree in plant science horticulture.

Woodlands and Meadows has been in existence since the mid-1990's. The name was derived from a desire to create a quiet natural setting to showcase the plants. As a passionate collector of new and unusual plants, I needed an outlet to share my enthusiasm, said Jane.

This inspired us to make sure the nursery retained a natural feel about it.

As the name implies, we have an extensive list of native perennials. We also take pride in our extensive and exceptional collection of unusual perennials. Many of the plants are rare or hard to find in the ordinary garden centers. Over 90% of the plants we sell, we propagate ourselves either from seed, cuttings or divisions.

As part of customer service, Jane shares her extensive gardening knowledge so the person who buys a plant knows how to best care for it.
